

Introduction

Background

Linux have the lowest desktop market share in the world.

Main Idea

Linux should be used more on the desktop, especially for beginner programmers in the computer science major.

Body Paragraph 1

Linux is a reliable and secure OS, because it's open-source nature.

Details

1. It's free as in speech.
2. Everybody can contribute to fix issues without waiting for maintainers to fix.
3. Full control on OS updates.

Body Paragraph 2

Linux has a more flexible environment for developing software.

Details

1. Broad community of developers.
2. Almost all development tools already available on Linux.
3. More customizable to fit user's need.
4. It has powerful scripting tools called Bash.

Body Paragraph 3

Linux is lighter than other competing OSes (OSX and Windows).

Details

1. CPU and Memory usage is significantly lower.
2. Less bloatware and unnecessary.
3. Can basically run almost anywhere.

Conclusion

Linux is a better OS for developers, especially for young programmers. It is reliable, more secure, and even lighter to run. It also has more flexible environment for developing software. That's why many developers using Linux to be their main Operating System to daily drive.